Success tips

Choosing a project to enter

- Entries are not judged against each other. Review the judging criteria for Group 1 and make sure you can “sell” the project in each area that will be judged.
- Let it grow. Allow plants to mature before entering. Group 1 projects (except seasonal color entries) must be at least two years old and no more than seven years old.

Make your case

- Pay close attention to the judging criteria. Use photos and their captions along with the project’s goals and challenges to tell a story and explain why the project deserves an award.

Photography

- Photography is the most important part of your entry. You have a maximum of 12 opportunities to convince the judges that your entry deserves an award.
- Consider the view from multiple angles to best capture the project in its entirety.

- Time of day is important. The light is always most flattering at dawn and dusk. If you must shoot in the middle of the day, choose an overcast day or use a polarizing filter.
- Spend time prepping the area. This is like advertising dollars. Put down fresh pine straw. Replace flowers if needed. Cut the grass. Remove the dead leaves.
- “Before” and “after” shots have the most impact. Take shots from the same angle with some sort of landmark in view to help with visual reference. That makes the transformation easily apparent to the judges.
- Tell the story with your photos. Take a variety of shots, some from a distance, some medium and some close-ups for detail.
- Illustrate your main points. What are the judging criteria for the category? Make sure your photos give visual evidence of how you excelled in each area.
- Set the stage. Give living spaces more life with staging. A pitcher of water, some glasses and a book on a poolside table or the family dog sleeping on the lawn.
- Clean with a fine-tooth comb. That one stray leaf or scrap of paper jumps off the screen when the image is enlarged and viewed by the judges.
- Use a tripod. Most landscapes should be shot with a large depth of field which could mean a slow shutter speed, requiring the stability of a tripod.
- Keep it simple. A few strong elements are more interesting than a lot of small facets. If there is too much going on, the eye doesn't know where to focus and the impact is lost.
- Consider hiring a photographer. It would be a shame to misrepresent your project with photos that don't do it justice. Make sure the photographer understands the story you want to tell - share the judging criteria with the photographer so they can capture the right shots.

Work hard, celebrate harder

You and your crews are used to working long hard hours, but when was the last time you celebrated your success? Take the time to take a bow. The GALA awards are a great way to reward yourself and your team.
